DEATHS.

In New Hartford, October 13th, JANE, daughter of Jane and Alexander Patterson, aged 4 years. The day previous Br. and Sister Patterson were necessarily absent from home, and left the deceased in charge of the family. On their return, about 4 o'clock P.M., as they approached the house, they discovered an unusual agitation among the members of their family circle. Flames had, by some means, communicated with the clothing of their daughter, and before they could be extinguished, death had marked her for the tomb. She suffered until 9 o'clock next morning, when God took her to Himself. Funeral on the 14th, and sermon by
