

[Coleburn, Mary]

DEATHS.

In this city [Utica], on the 8th ult., of consumption, after a distressing sickness of several months, which she bore with true patience and Christian resignation, Mrs. MARY, consort of Mr. Amasa Coleburn, aged 33 years. Mrs. C. had been called in the providence of God, a few months before her death, to attend on the protracted sickness and witness the painful death of an infant daughter, (Mary Elizabeth), who died February 23d, aged three months and fifteen days,) and from the fatigue and weakness, accompanied with a cold, which she experienced in watching and finally parting with her child, she never recovered, but continued gradually to decline till her death. Lovely in person, accomplished in mind, and amiable in manners, she was respected by all who knew her and particularly endeared to her intimate acquaintances. She died as she had lived, firm in the faith of the great doctrine of universal restoration, which she found her comfort in life and her support in death. She has left a deeply afflicted husband and two children to mourn their irreparable loss in her removal at the meridian of life. May a merciful God comfort them with the assurance that their loss is her unspeakable gain.
