

[Davis, Milton J.]

Obituary.—Under the appropriate head in another column will be found a notice of the death of Milton J. Davis, late of this city. The deceased has for the last few years resided in this city, a portion of the time attending Eastman's Commercial College, but his health becoming impaired, he removed to New Orleans, in hopes to find relief in the warm and genial climate of the South. But this was of no avail; the unrelenting hand of disease had fastened its deadly grasp upon him, under which he gradually passed away. On the 2d of the present month his mother was summoned to his bedside in New Orleans, to which she immediately repaired, to minister such comforts and consolation as only a mother can give. She arrived there a few days before he died. He was conscious of the speedy approach of his final change, and glided away with a calm and hopeful resignation. He was a promising young man of 22 summers, of a genial and friendly disposition, having a large circle of friends and acquaintances in this city who are called upon to mourn his early death. He was a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his associates in that Order.

The Evening Express, Rochester NY, Mon 23 Apr 1866

DEATHS.

Of consumption, in New Orleans, La., on the 19th inst., Milton J. Davis, late of this city, aged 22 years and 4 months, only son of Joseph W. and Lydia C. Davis, of Pittsford, N.Y.

Funeral at the First Universalist church, South Clinton street [avenue], on Wednesday afternoon, 2d prox., at 2 o'clock. Friends of the family are invited to meet at the house of T. B. Colvin, No. 14 Howell street, at one o'clock.

Union and Advertiser, Rochester NY, Mon 30 Apr 1866