

[Hill, Harriet]

OBITUARY

The following clipping is taken from the Oxford Times. The deceased was a sister of Mrs. John Flagg and well known in this section: "On Thursday afternoon the spirit of Mrs. Harriet Hill was called to its home beyond the shadows, there to take up the thread of life where it was laid down here. Through all the lights and shadows, joys and sorrows, successes and misfortunes of her earthly career it could be said of her 'she hath done what she could.' and living right, we cannot feel that she died wrong. She was a Universalist of the most genuine type. And while children, friends and neighbors will miss her cheering presence, all these must feel that a brave, hopeful spirit is waiting to welcome them on the further shore. Funeral services were held at her late residence in this town of Saturday, Rev. Charles Parmatier officiating. Interment in the Warn-Ten Broeck cemetery" [in Brisben].
