

[Lewis, Chester Franklin]

Chester Franklin Lewis

Chester, a young man of twenty-one years, whose home was in Watertown, was a student at St. Lawrence, studying for the ministry. After only a few days' sickness he died on September 6th. His death came as a great shock to us all in Watertown, and to the students at St. Lawrence.

He was a young man of sterling qualities, with high ideals and consecrated to his church and all things noble and true. He was deeply religious and even as a young boy he was always interested in Biblical and religious matters. He had a very keen mind and was naturally a student. His professors speak in highest terms of him as a student, as a manly young man, and as one who gave great promise as a useful and a successful minister.

I was called upon to conduct the private funeral service on September 7th.

Harry Westbrook Reed

Empire State Universalist, Carthage NY, November 1926

Transcribed on 12 Mar 2013 by Karen E. Dau of Rochester, NY