

[Robinson, Nathan T.]

SOUTHAMPTON

Nathan T. Robinson, a former resident of this place, died at Manchester, N.H., December 26. His remains, then put in a receiving vault, were brought to this place last week and buried in Oakland Cemetery. The following from a local paper where he died, we publish by request:

Funeral services over the remains of the late Nathan T. Robinson were held at the Lowell-street Universalist Church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, prayer having been previously said at the room of the deceased in Straw's block. Rev. W. H. Morrison conducted the services, and the regular Universalist choir, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Horne, Miss Grace Nichols and A. O. Delioff, furnished music. Passaconaway tribe, Improved Order of Red Men and Louis Bell post, G.A.R., acted as escort in conveying the remains from the room to the church, music being furnished by the War Veterans drum corps. The overseers of the Amoskeag corporation and the Woman's Relief corps attended the funeral in a body. The bearers were Silas Stetson, Christopher C. Colby, John G. Hutchinson, H. C. Rampo, William C. Blodgett and John P. McNally. Among the floral offerings were a reclining anchor inscribed "Rest," from the overseers of the Amoskeag mills; a pillow, inscribed "Our overseer" from the employees of the deceased; a pillow, inscribed "Tribe No. 5," from Passaconaway tribe, Improved Order of Red Men; a closed book from relatives and a bunch of calla lilies from "a friend." The church was filled to overflowing during the services, those present being largely employees of the deceased and others connected with the mills of the city. The remains reposed in a rich broadcloth covered casket, bearing a plate inscribed in old English, "Nathan T. Robinson." The services were brief but a considerable time was required for the large number of people present to view the remains. At the close of the service the body was taken to the city tomb in the Valley cemetery, where both the G.A.R. and Red Men's burial services were performed. The remains will repose in the city tomb for the present.
