

[Rose, Finette]

DEATHS.
[abridged]

In Sodus, July 23d, of scarlet fever, Miss Finette Rose, aged 19.

Thus in the morning of life has an innocent and excellent mind left this world for a brighter and better state—to dwell in glory and peace immortal. In the death of this young lady, society is deprived of one of its purest ornaments, and indulgent parents, fond brothers and sisters, and a numerous circle of relatives, are called to mourn the loss of one endeared to them by indissoluble ties of affection and friendship, and to witness the cherished object of their love laid low in dust. But they mourn not as those who have no hope... May the dew drops of Divine grace dwell richly in the hearts of these mourning relatives and friends. The subject of notice was a consistent and exemplary believer in a world's salvation from sin and misery, and the believers of an opposite faith manifested their respect by mingling their sympathies and weeping with those that mourned... No ceremonies were performed at the funeral and burial of the deceased. An address appropriate to the occasion, was delivered on Sunday, August 16th, by the writer of this notice. The Episcopalians kindly opened their church for the services. Their liberality in so doing will be remembered and their christian favours duly appreciated.
