

[Slee, William D.]

Death of William D. Slee

William D. Slee, one of the oldest citizens of Auburn, died at the City Hospital last evening. Mr. Slee suffered a fractured hip as the result of a fall at his home about a month ago and the shock coupled with his advanced age was the cause of his demise.

The deceased formerly conducted a coal business in this city but retired from active business several years ago. One son, F. W. Slee of this city, survives. Arrangements for the funeral are incomplete.

Funeral of William D. Slee

The funeral of William D. Slee, who died at the City Hospital last Thursday, was held Saturday afternoon at the Tallman-Walker Undertaking Establishment in Clark Street. Rev. A. [Arnold] S. Yantis, pastor of the First Universalist Church, officiated. The casket bore many flora, tokens of esteem from old friends of the deceased, whose passing takes away one of the oldest residents of the city. The bearers were: James Lyon, Frank B. Ives, S. C. Tallman, Charles H. Manro, M. A. Lawrence and Arthur D. Merritt. Burial was made in Fort Hill Cemetery.
