Mrs. Lydia Garlock Tingue died at 8 Clark street last evening in her 97th year, following an illness of five years. She had been a resident of St. Luke's Home for eight years preceding her illness.

In 1875, some years after the death of her husband, she was again married, to Simeon Tingue, wealthy Fort Plain dry goods merchant, who died several years ago. She was a member of the Universalist Church of Fort Plain.
