

[Whiting, William J.]

William J. Whiting Dies Suddenly

William J. Whiting, for years a member of the school news department of the old Globe and more recently on the staff of the Evening World, died Saturday after an attack of appendicitis. Mr. Whiting was on his vacation when stricken. Funeral services will be held at 7:45 this evening at the Fairchild Chapel, 86 Lefferts Place, Brooklyn.

Mr. Whiting was born and educated in Brooklyn and was graduated from the New York Military Academy. He went into business after leaving school. Sixteen years ago he gave up business to enter journalism as assistant in the school department of the New York Globe. He had numerous friends in the city school system and in the newspaper world.

He lived at 412 East Eighteenth street with his wife and son, who is a student at Erasmus Hall High School. He was a member of All Souls Universalist Church.

The New York Sun, New York NY, Mon. 8 Sep 1930

Transcribed on 10 Oct 2012 by Karen E. Dau of Rochester, NY