

[Wycuff, Levi]

DEATHS.

In Lansing, Tompkins co., May 26th, of consumption, LEVI WYCUFF, son of Jesse Wycuff, in the 26th year of his age. It was his happiness to believe in the final restitution of all things; and that faith which was his companion of health was his solace in death, after cheering him through a protracted illness of one year, during which every effort was made by those of opposite faith, to shake his hope in God as the Father and Saviour of all.

The consolations of the Gospel were presented by Br. Cheney to a large assembly, embracing the mourning family and friends. And yet, some of the Partialists in that assembly, not content with having assailed the deceased while life remained, chose the time of the funeral for their scoffs and sneers!—some of which were not a little insulting. It was remarked that our Methodist brethren, in particular, could be distinguished from the rest of the congregation, by their want of decorum; and yet there were some honorable exceptions. Some of our opposers expressed themselves well satisfied with the discourse, as were probably a majority of the hearers. When will bigotry cease to follow with malignity even to the course of the grave, and professed Christians learn to mingle with common decency in the rites of public worship, and hear with calmness, and judge without passion, the doctrine presented to them in sincerity and affection?
